
Editorial

Season's greetings! It brings us great pleasure to welcome you to this guest-edited issue of Transmotion on Indigeneity and the Anthropocene. And with no apology for brevity, it also brings me great pleasure to usher you straight on to Martin Premoli's wonderful editorial/introduction to this issue... Congratulations to Martin and David for a deeply absorbing issue—the first of two, with the second to come in the spring of 2022. As ever, our team of review editors have put together a fantastic selection of reviews, and we are grateful as ever to all those who work with us behind the scenes to put the journal together and make it a valuable contribution to the field.

As a reminder to our readers, Transmotion is open access, thanks to the generous sponsorship of the University of Kent: all content is fully available on the open internet with no paywall or institutional access required, and it always will be. We are published under a Creative Commons 4.0 license, meaning in essence that any articles or reviews may be copied and re-used provided that the source and author is acknowledged. We strongly believe in this model, which makes research and academic insight available and useable for the widest possible community. We also believe in keeping to the highest academic standards: thus all articles are double-blind peer reviewed by at least two reviewers, and each issue approved by an editorial board of senior academics in the field (listed in the Front Matter of the full PDF and in the online "About" section).
